Patriotic Exercises Were Appropriate and Inspiring

When it was apparent that the succes of Monessen's Memorial exercises depended upon the sunshine, Old Sol poked his smiling countenance from behind the clouds that had overshadowed the city for the past three days and the festivities began with a will.

The committees in charge of the affair had completed all plans and promptly at 2 o'clock the veterans and their escort of about fifty members of the Boy Scouts with a fife and drum corps and the Louhi band left Third street for the band stand at Sixth street park. Here a large crowd had gathered including over 2,000 school children.

On the stand which was decorated in the national colors, were seated the principal orators of the day, Colonel Edward E. Robbins of Greensburg, Chairman H. Dallas McCabe and a number of prominent citizens of the town who acted as vice presidents for the occasion. Chairman McCabe introduced Col. Robbins to the audience and this well known man, who is a native product of the township out of which Monessen was carved, delivered an address that filled the hearts of every true American with patriotism.

Senator Robbins made his usual interesting address, talking for an hour upon historical facts in relation to the Civil war. He gave a brief resume of the Civil conflict and paid a glowing tribute to American statesmen. He eulogized the old soldiers and told of their hardships and privations. He impresed the importance of reading good literature and refered to speeches that should be committed to memory, among these was included Lincoln's immortal speech at Gettysburg. He referred to the rise and fall of Rome and said a country can be great as long as she is pure within. He held out the importance of purity of the ballot as the essential element in the life and perpetuity of a great nation. The Senator talked for more than an hour and people stood in the hot sun and listened to him attentively. It seemed he was at his best, although he spoke under difficulties such as the noise of children and a scattered crowd owing to the location of the grounds.

The Louhi band played several selections and the School Children's chorus sang several songs with the assistance of the audience. At the conclusion of this meeting, adjournment was made to another section of the park where the George D. Bayard Post No. 178 of Belle Vernon conducted the solemn ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, assisted by a firing squad from Sergeant P. C. Grace Camp No. 265 Sons of Veterans of Belle Vernon and a chorus of 50 school girls from Monessen under the leadership of Prof. R. W. Davies.

Band Stand Will Become Popular

Since yesterday's successful Memorial services held in the Sixth street park, there has been much comment on the enterprise which prompted the erection of the band stand. People now have an insight as to the importance of improving the parks for public use.

The Ministerial association is planning to hold union services in the same park, using the band stand for the platform for the choir and speakers. There is a fund in the hands of the city treasury for the improvement of the parks and no time should be lost in having a competent engineer lay out the grounds for improvement. This park can be made the center of attraction during the summer and the place for all public entertainments. The park and playgrounds committee of council and the same committee of the Board of Trade should call a meeting at once to discuss ways of meeting the present emergency.

GYMNASTIC EXHIBITION SATURDAY

The Third Annual Field Meet of the Sixth Group R. V. G. C. Slovak Falcons was held in this city Saturday afternoon, and despite the threatening weather, a large crowd of people were present and took part in the exercises. Headed by a brass band, the participants, including men, women and children started to march to Electric park where the exhibition was to be held. but a heavy rain put the marchers to cover, and the exercises were given in the Ruthenian hall, at Second and Schoonmaker.

The Sixth Group consisted of 18 nests of Falcons from all towns in Western Pennsylvania and as far west as Bellaire, O., but owing to the inclement weather, only about 140 people took part in the drills, these coming from Brownsville, Pittsburgh, Uniontown, Bellaire, O., Perryopolis and Monessen. The Perryopolis people carried off first honors for the men in all events, while the local ladies took first place in their events.

In the evening a reception was held in the Ruthenian hall with Michael Senchak, treasurer of the group, acting as chairman. M. Kindlac, president of the local group, was the first speaker of the evening with the address of welcome, and he was followed by Rev. S. Morvaek, the local pastor, who gave a short talk. Several musical numbers added to the evening's entertainment and the local Falcons presented a playlet entitled "The Devil in the Garden of Eden." Ivan Darner, secretary of the Slovak League of America, was present and gave the principal address of the evening. He was followed by J. Matiasvosky, head captain of the organization in this district, who gave an interesting talk on gymnastics. Following the singing of the national hymn, "Hej Slovaci" by the audience, the meeting was brought to a close, following which a social hour was enjoyed.

FEDERAL JUDGES POWER QUESTIONED

Washington. D. C., June 1—In the United States Supreme court, the question of a judge's authority to suspend sentence indefinitely will be brought up for settlement. The Department of Justice has challenged this right in its writ for a mandamus to compel Judge Killits of the northern Ohio Federal District court to enforce the sentence originally imposed by him on James J. Henahan, convicted of violation of the banking laws. The court will probably render its decision today.

WILL HOLD OUTING AT KENNYWOOD

At a meeting of the Monongahela Valley Picnic association of the I. O. O. F. at Charleroi Friday evening, plans were completed for the eighth annual picnic of the association to be held at Kennywood park, Friday, July 16. Special trains will be run on the Pennsylvania that day from all points between Roscoe and West Elizabeth and with fair weather it is expected that this will be the largest affair held by the lodge.

The association includes Roscoe, Fayette City, Belle Vernon, Monessen, Charleroi, Donora, Monongahela and Elizabeth and each of these towns will no doubt send large delegations to the outing this year. Special arrangements will be made to convey the people to the park and a big sports program has been arranged for the day. Robert McKelvie of this city, is secretary of the Picnic association and will see that the local delegation is well taken care of on that day.

Memorial Services Well Attended

The Union Memorial services held in the Star theatre Sunday evening, under the direction of the civic committee of the Board of Trade was well attended. Those present were treated with an exceptionally strong patriotic address by Rev. Davies of the M. E. church. On account of the hurried preparation, many little details were omitted yet withall, Monessen is directing her energies along the right line to awaken the true spirit of American patriotism. The civic committee are to be congratulated on their effort this year to commemorate the nation's heroic dead. The sermon delivered by Rev. Davies was most appropriate to the occasion and in keeping with sentiment of our times. He not only recalled in graphic phrases the great sacrifices of the old soldiers in defense of their country's flag, but he applied the truth to the present needs of our beloved country. Since our atmosphere is surcharged with the lightenings of war that the truest national patriotism is necessary to direct the affairs of the nation through the hours of trial. Dr. Keller offered an earnest prayer for our President, and those allied with him in directing the destinies of the nation. Rev. Swain closed the services with an earnest prayer that peace might soon reign among the nations and that our own country should never again know the bitterness of cruel war.

Time Works Wonders

It is not often that an editor hands himself a compliment. But this is the exception, and that is just what we are doing, because a certain well known citizen of this community has and is persistently recognizing the value of this paper as a reliable disseminator of local news,and has paid us this compliment in a manner which speaks volumes for his knowledge of the good things of life. He is not destitute of this world's goods, but he possesses the rare faculty of holding onto that which he gets, lest the pangs of poverty overtake him in his declining years.

He possesses a wide knowledge of local affairs, because he is a constant reader of this paper, and the knowledge extracted therefrom, is turned to good account in his own behalf.

If an important event is soon to occur, he knows of it in advance, because he has read of it in this paper. If there is a bargain to be had anywhere in the community he is promptly apprised of the fact, because of that, too, he has read in this paper. And if an acquaintance is sick, or death has overtaken some member of a family, or the stork has paid a visit to the home of some friend, he is among the first to extend his condolences or congratulations—because of these, also, he has read the paper. He is a man of wisdom—a pillar of strength—with a brain which absorbs to the utmost of the essence of life. Few things escape his notice, for he is ever on the alert. But the one thing which he never overlooks is this paper, and therein lies the compliment which we take to ourself. It gives us a feeling that we are something more than a mere worm in human shape,that we may be even a whole cog in the community wheel.

True, he is not a subscriber to the paper—his dollar never reaches this office—but he reads the paper just the same. For his neighbor is a subscriber and pays in advance; in his generosity he lends the paper to the "pillar of strength" by request. But it may not always be so. In time we have hopes that the "pillar" will pay us the super-compliment of permitting us to add his own name to our subscription list—paid in advance, of course.

Time sometimes works wonders, even in the newspaper field. And we have hopes, strong hopes.

The real "good fellow" is the fellow who knows something good about everybody and tells it. He never knocks on his neighbor or digs up the past. He always lends a helping hand to the little fellow who is up against it and gives him a chance to make good. He never forgets to do and say the little things that make his wife happy. His children find him a jolly chum and an ever-ready playmate. His home is a haven of love, happiness and contentment. The real "good fellow" is the world's greatest asset.

IOWA ROOSTERS GET THE AXE TODAY

Ames, Ia., June 1—As the result of an official edict of the State Agricultural College here, a general masacre of roosters begins all over the state today for the purpose of eliminating a three million annual loss because of spoiled chick-developed eggs, which has been charged against the time honored herald of the morning. And so this is "Dead Rooster Week" in Iowa, and the tables steam with stewed rooster, rooster potpie and other culinary forms of his carcass. Those that are not to fall before the axe are to be penned up. The fall of the barnyard king comes about through the discovery that infertile eggs keep longer and better, and that hens lay fully as many eggs when the roosters are not around.

PULL BOOZE BOTTLES OUT OF WINDOWS

Newark, N. J., June 1—Proprietors of liquor emporiums will be obliged to discard the window decorations of whiskey bottles, beginning today. MICHIGAN WRECK CASE IS TO BE TRIED TODAY

Detroit, Mich., June 1—A hearing will be given in court today to the three street car men who are charged with manslaughter in connection with the deaths of 15 persons in the wreck on April 14 at Delray. John F. Westover, a student motorman, Richard Vallade, a motor inspector and George Asam, conductor, are the three men held. The men were operating the car when it was struck by a freight train with frightful results.

FREE BOY WHO KILLED MOTHER WITH HAMMER

Columbus, O., June 1—Through a commutation of sentence from life imprisonment to ten years in the Ohio penitentiary, Don Harvey Hazel of Toledo, will be released this month. Former Governor Cox reduced the sentence last January. The murder attracted wide attention some years ago, partly because of the brutal nature of the crime and partly from the youth of the prisoner. Hazel was convicted in 1908 of having murdered his mother with a hammer. The boy was only 16 years old when he entered the prison. He has been under observation by sanitary experts, who proclaim him entirely sane. Since going to jail he has become an electric and gas engineer.

A Resident Known to all our Readers Relates an Experience

Readers of the Independent have been told again and again of the merits of that old reliable, time proved remedy—Doan's Kidney Pills. The experiences told are not those of unknown persons living far away. The cases are Monessen cases told by Monessen people.

Mrs. R. Gilmore, 102½ First street, Monessen, says: "I suffered for years from a lame back and often when I stooped the misery was so intense that I cried aloud. If I moved suddenly, it seemed as if something snapped in my back. When I exerted myself in sweeping or doing housework, the pain was unbearable. I felt tired and listless all the time and my head ached. My eyes were affected and I was all worn out. I consulted several doctors but none of them seemed to do me any good, and finally I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Others of the family used Doan's Kidney Pills as a kidney tonic and they highly of them."

THIRD STORY

"We find the deceased came to his death by his own hands."

The puisy coroner blinked at the speed with which his jury returned their verdict. Not that any other verdict was possible—everybody agreed as to that. A waste of time and public moneys—the two weeks' hearing

President Darius Brown was dead There could be no doubt about it. He had been respected, living, dead, he was a knave. Gunshot wound experts and the mute, mechanical witness proved the jury correct in their finding.

Expert accountants, expert sleuths, layman witnesses showed conclusively the crookedness of the late Darius Brown. But the moneys he had filched from the bank funds and the securities he had borrowed from the vaults had been found beside his lifeless body Depositors had lost noth ing. Future depositors had gained an honest president. Darius Brown had lost his life. So why bother?

Nodding their heads sagely with the satisfaction of "having known all along," the audience left the stuffy room. Four of that audience slipped furtively out, as though fearing some thing invisible was dogging their footsteps, casting a chill shadow between their shoulder blades But that is my story—the tale of the real happenings at the Fourth National

I.

President Darius Brown gradually permitted a broad smile of satisfaction to overspread his face as he studied the record of his first paying teller He waved the Pinkerton representative, with the little bundle under his arm, away, while he stared absently at the opposite wall, then pressed the annunciator and ordered the negro porter to send in Mr Drum

'Go to the vault, Travers, and fix up the camera," he smiled at the Pinkerton man. "I'm just taking a minute to reward a young man who has helped get enough securities into that vault to make it worth guarding."

The detective glanced keenly at the young man who answered the summons, then his lips tightened a bit. He knew the face of Joseph Drum, had seen the young man mingling with a rather fast set, had marked his presence at the Gayety stage door He was an old-school detective who believed the leisure hours of a banking man might be better employed.

Darius Brown noticed the look, the appraisement of the sleuth, and laughed as he whirled about upon his teller.

"Looking over the books and recollecting the circumstances attendant on certain deposits," he began pon derously, "I find that you have brought a good many customers to the Fourth National, Drum I also am agreeably reminded that you have shown good judgement in advising depositors regarding certain investments they intended making You are a bit gay, I know, but I have every reason to believe that you are careful, and I know you are working for the bank outside of hours. This is the twentieth century, Drum, and I am a twentieth century man. So I am increasing your salary to five thousand dollars a year."

Joseph Drum's jaw dropped in amazed incredulity,

"Don't thank me," Brown said crisply "Just continue to be careful Be as gay as you please, so long as you're careful and it brings us the right sort of deposits and doesn't affect the clearness of your brain. And," he wagged a long forefinger rather playfully as he gave the warning, "don't wear out the bricks in front of the Gayety stage door."

"I don't think I'll need to make but one more trip there—now."

President Brown halted, his hand on the knob, as though to answer. Then he smiled as he understood the full meaning of Drum's cryptic rejoinder and joined the detective, who had just finished adjusting his apparatus in the door of the huge, black vault.

"It works this way, Mr. Brown," explained the man, "The camera slides into the steel mesh back here, giving the lens the angle to catch anybody tampering with the combination. Here are the triggers on each side of the door, all set, and the flash powders are placed in these little containers. Now, look! Here's the trick" He knelt a short ways before the vault door, prying with his knife and finally drawing from place a loose tile. He smiled with satisfaction at the exclamation of admiration from President Brown as he looked into the aperture and saw the ingenious method in which the trigger, hidden there, was connected with the triggers beside the camera.

Carefully the detective replaced the tile, then drew away. His back suddenly stooped while a furtive, evil expression grew in his eyes as he slipped stealthily toward the safe Without explanation, the bank president saw that he was simulating a burglar. He watched keenly, uttering an ejaculation of surprised delight as the man's foot touched the loose tile and, simultaneously, the flash powders flamed from the door, leaving a plume of hot, acid smoke behind

"And there you have the face of the bank thief!" he chuckled. "Very ingenious indeed!"

He smiled and turned away, closing the door behind him as he resumed his desk For the hours of a bank executive are known to no man save himself. There were a few details of the business to be righted and then a study of the market—

Darius Brown's lips tightened as he went over again and again certain bewildering evolutions of stocks in which he was interested Well, he would wait and see what he could make of them in the morning

But eager though he was to find that market page of his paper at breakfast, he still had time to pause a while and smile at the simple announcement on the preceding page, of the marriage of Joseph Drum, paying teller of the Fourth National bank, to Miss Flo Williams, who had been lending her charms of face and figure to the show girl contingent of the Gayety theater.

II.

Though he would have knocked down the man who even queried him regarding his matrimonial judgment. Joseph Drum flushed as he reluctantly gave room to a traitorous thought in his mind For weeks, for months he had felt the ground slipping beneath his feet, had seen the pyramid of debt piling higher and higher, yet had dared take no exact measurement of it, hoping against all reasonable hope that "something would turn up," to save him.

Five thousand dollars a year! What a huge sum it had seemed to them both! His lips curled in a bitter smile. Five thousand dollars a year and already, within a few months after marriage, his surplus savings had been wiped out, his salary spent, and he owed ten thousand dollars.

And it was his own fault—he, the banker, his fault It was a child he had married, a pampered, spoiled child

A perfect wife she had made him, perfect save in her extravagance. And he had not warned at the time when warning would have been easy. Now, she would take it as a reproach. Now where could he hope to raise ten thousand dollars? How could he make the six hundred dollars in his pocket over into a sufficient sum to start him anew?

He pushed the tell-tale tabulation hurriedly aside as Flo swept into the bank and sought his cage. The old thrill of delight swept other thoughts aside as he reveled in the grace, the beauty of her, drank in deep drafts of the intoxicating devotion that glowed in her eyes as they found his own. He even smiled as, in her dear, wheedling way she glowingly described the beauties of a pearl neck lace, amazingly low-priced, she had seen in the window of Lattimer's jewel shop. Drum was still smiling as his eyes followed her out of sight, then the smile disappeared as a movement of his hands brought the fatal inventory of debts to light again.

Not more closely did the closely meshed cage shut him away from those outside than his position debarred him from raising such an amount of money.

Even as he thought of substantial men's opinion of him, his brain, by some strange quip peculiar to those closely harassed, flew to Fred Williams—his brother-in-law. Their acquantance was but casual. The man was a gambler, a sporting man of a character such as would have made closer acquaintance impossible for a bank teller. Still, he had taken a liking to the man on the night of that wedding supper that had lasted till dawn He had noticed that the gambler touched no liquor; that he skillfully managed to handle the other guests who had imbibed too freely

The hours dragged their interminable length across the clock dial. He thought the hands would never point to three. In those hours the teller seemed to pass a lifetime But they finally came to an end and, before the doors were even closed he was upon the street, striding swiftly toward a certain cigar store, which he knew was used as a blind for the gambling house in the rear which Williams visited.

The gambler made explanation simple by cutting squarely to the point. From under his brows he appraised Drum, in that swift, incisive glance which a faro dealer gives the players about his bank, most keenly and decisively appraising of all locks.

"Flo's a great Jane, Drum," the gambler admitted slowly "She's been a dandy sister to me But she certainly does throw up the coin She's got you on the bum already How much are you in for?"

He whistled as Drum thrust the list of debts into his hand his eyes squinting narrowly from it to the harassed teller. Suddenly he came to a decision.

"Well, you're nailed hard, old man, and you've got to make a clean-up to break loose. That's all I can see to do and, believe me, if there's a loophole from any scrape I don't need a spyglass to find it. You've got six hundred beans and you've gotta have ten thousand dollars Take a chance—that's the only answer"

"It's the only way I can see."

"Sure Well, I've got a sweet little thing bottled up at this very moment, Drum I was going down on it hook, line and sinker myself, but I'll turn it over to you. Balamour starts in the third race tomorrow. She'll be a long shot because she's a dog by birth and by performance. But she's prepped to win The owners have

"PAY UP" WEEK IN MISSOURI TOWN

Hume, Mo., June 1—In line with the excellent idea of the Chinese to pay all their debts on New Years Day and start the year with a clean slate, the people of Hume began today a campaign for the payment of local debts. "Pay Up Week" will extend until Saturday and during the interim everybody is expected to clear all their debts, whether loans or purchase debts. The general squaring up began this morning. Beyond the money considerations, it is planned to bring about a more neighborly feeling, and the settling of personal differences and grudges.

Evangelist Taylor Begins Campaign

At a well filled house Sunday night, Rev. A. B. Taylor of the Hamilton Evangelistic party and Lou Rush of the Moody Bible school, Chicago, brought the gospel home to every heart in message and in song. Mr. Taylor's theme was "A Solemn Question," Gen 44:34, "For how shall I go up to my father and the lad not be with me?" The evangelist grasped his audience at the beginning and held them spell bound while he brought the truth home to all. He said in part: "You fathers and mothers are responsible for the salvation of your children, and how shall you go up and the lad be not with you? The world is getting the hearts of the people while the church is being lulled to sleep at the hands of the Devil."

At this junction he plead with the church members to get awake and do their duty. He also pointed out the fact that we are not concerned about the salvation of souls as much as we are about world pleasure. With strong illustrations he drove every word home. Mr. Rush proved to the people that he is master of his work In addition to his chorus work his solo work is above the average. No one can afford to miss any of these meetings. We invite you all to come. Meetings will begin every evening at 8 o'clock sharp. Special song service the first half hour.

Last night Rev. Taylor took for his text "Prayer," James 5-17-18 After an inspiring song service by Mr Rush, the evangelist came forth in his usual way and drove the truth home to every heart. He emphasized the fact that Christians do not pray enough. Rev. Taylor does not believe in driving people, but of the leading type of evangelists. After closing up his powerful message with beautiful illustrations, he made a plea for all Christiasn to come to the altar and consevrate themselves anew. At this call every Christian came at once and while some wept aloud, others poured out their hearts to Almighty God for His blessing upon Monessen and all unsaved people and for the Christians who have grown cold. It was a glorious sight. It seemed as if the day of "Pentecost" had returned No man or woman can afford to miss these services. We extend a cordial invitation to all.

On account of the dedication services of the High school building this evening, we will meet at 7 o'clock for prayer and consecration, and dismiss in ample time for all to enjoy the services at the school house. Wednesday evening we will resume our usual time, 8 o'clock sharp.
